PREFATORY NOTE

THE following General Orders are a full transcript of a Ms. orderly book which recently came into my possession. The manuscript belonged to the regiment of General Phineas Lyman, of Connecticut, one of the commanding officers in the campaign against the French, and a man whose merits and sterling qualities were not recognized by his English colleagues and superiors. The credit that was owing to him was given to others; but a study of the campaign of 1756 shows how ably he performed his part, and how much its success depended upon his efforts.

We cannot seek in orderly books for deeds of bravery, or incidents of battle; but we do find what is of equal interest—the discipline of the camp and the punishment of wrong doing. The dry and somewhat colorless record of the troops from day to day becomes of value when the history of a company or of an army is to be written. Where discipline is maintained and a proper care for the health and morals of the men is bestowed, surely praise is due. In this light the orders hold a high rank as authoritative records, and for this reason I have deemed them worthy of publication.
